

Catterthun Belinda Hunter: A Scottish Hill of Legends and Lore

Catterthun by Belinda Hunter

★★★★☆ 4.5 out of 5

Language	: English
File size	: 531 KB
Text-to-Speech	: Enabled
Screen Reader	: Supported
Enhanced typesetting	: Enabled
Word Wise	: Enabled
Print length	: 216 pages
Lending	: Enabled

Catterthun Belinda Hunter is a remote and enigmatic hill located in Angus, Scotland. Its summit is crowned by an Iron Age hill fort, which is surrounded by an extensive network of prehistoric and medieval remains. The hill is also steeped in legend and folklore, and has been associated with everything from pagan rituals to battles with mythical creatures.

The Hill Fort

The hill fort at Catterthun Belinda Hunter is one of the largest and best-preserved in Scotland. It was built around 800 BC, and was occupied for several centuries. The fort consists of a massive stone wall, which encloses an area of around 12 acres. Inside the wall are the remains of several roundhouses, which were the dwellings of the fort's inhabitants.

The hill fort was a place of great strategic importance. It commanded a wide view of the surrounding countryside, and it was well-defended by its massive stone wall. The fort was also connected to a network of other hill forts in the area, which would have allowed its inhabitants to communicate with each other and to coordinate their defense against attack.

The Prehistoric and Medieval Remains

In addition to the hill fort, Catterthun Belinda Hunter is also home to a number of other prehistoric and medieval remains. These include the remains of a Bronze Age cairn, a Roman marching camp, and a medieval chapel. The cairn is a large mound of stones, which was probably built as a burial chamber. The Roman marching camp is a large enclosure, which was used by the Roman army as a temporary camp. The medieval chapel is a small, ruined building, which was probably built in the 12th century.

The Legends and Folklore

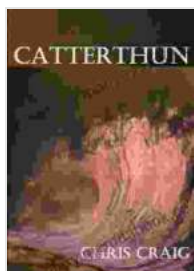

Catterthun Belinda Hunter is also steeped in legend and folklore. The hill is said to be the home of the "Green Lady", a mysterious figure who is said to haunt the hilltop. The Green Lady is said to be the spirit of a woman who was murdered on the hill, and her ghost is said to appear on misty nights.

The hill is also said to be the site of a battle between the ancient Picts and the Romans. The battle is said to have been fought in the 3rd century AD, and the Picts are said to have been victorious. The hill is also said to be the site of a pagan ritual, which was held by the ancient Celts. The ritual is said to have involved the sacrifice of a human being, and the hill is said to be haunted by the spirits of the victims.

Visiting Catterthun Belinda Hunter

Catterthun Belinda Hunter is a popular destination for hikers and history enthusiasts. The hill is accessible by a number of trails, which lead to the summit. The summit offers stunning views of the surrounding countryside, and it is a great place to enjoy a picnic or to simply relax and enjoy the scenery.

If you are interested in learning more about the history and archaeology of Catterthun Belinda Hunter, there are a number of resources available. The Angus Council website has a section on the hill, which includes information on its history and archaeology. The Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Scotland (RCAHMS) also has a website, which includes a detailed survey of the hill.

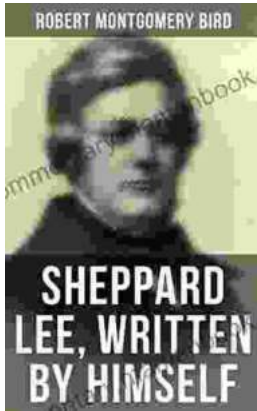

Catterthun by Belinda Hunter

★★★★☆ 4.5 out of 5

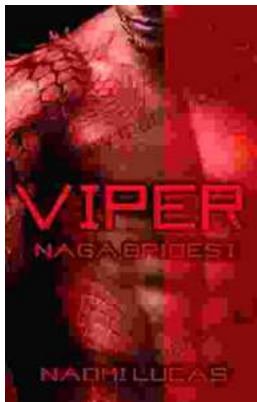

- Language : English
- File size : 531 KB
- Text-to-Speech : Enabled
- Screen Reader : Supported
- Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
- Word Wise : Enabled
- Print length : 216 pages
- Lending : Enabled

Sheppard Lee Written By Himself: A Journey of Self-Discovery and Transformation

In the realm of literature, few works delve as deeply into the intricacies of human identity as George MacDonald's seminal novel, Sheppard Lee Written...

Viper Naga Brides: Unveiling the Enthralling Fantasy World Created by Naomi Lucas

In the realm of fantasy literature, Naomi Lucas has emerged as a master storyteller, weaving intricate tales that captivate readers with their depth,...